GA Garden House Access

..... Revised 05/01/2018 Reviewed 05/01/2018

Policy Purpose

The Garden House memory care unit entry door is secured with a keypad. Access is controlled to reduce the likelihood of a memory impaired resident leaving the unit unescorted.

Definitions

Knox Box

Standard secure box used by Fire Departments to access keys to the building.

Guidelines

Emergency Access

- All doors to the Garden House unlock with activation of the fire alarm allowing free access to the unit. Team members will be stationed as appropriate to monitor the doors to prevent unescorted exit by residents.
- There is a Knox Box for the Fire Department located in the electrical room on the East side of the building that contains a fob and master key. Entry into the Garden House can be made directly from the electrical room containing the Knox Box.
- An alternate entry would be through either of the south exterior exits that may be opened with the master key.

Team Member Access

- Team members working in the Garden House will be given the keypad code for the unit. Department heads and ancillary staff who need access as part of their job duties will also be provided with the key code.
- The manager on duty and front desk receptionist will have access to the key code.
- Team members who do not have or forget the code can contact the front desk or manager on duty to obtain the code.

Family & Visitor Access

- Family members and visitors will not be given the key code to limit unintended exit by residents following them through the door.
- There is a button to contact staff on the outside of the entry doors with a two-way speaker. Team members will respond to let visitors and family members in to the Garden House.
- Visitors and family members can alert a staff member when they are ready to leave, and the team member will enter the code to permit exit from the unit.

Understanding Benefits and Risks in Allowing Unlicensed Proxy Caregivers to Take Care of Me

Georgia law now permits me, as an individual with a disability to choose to allow unlicensed proxy caregivers who have been properly trained to perform health maintenance activities for me. Health maintenance activities are those health-related things I would normally do for myself, but for my disability. Typically, a registered nurse would teach me how to do these things as part of my ongoing care. However, I could also be taught by my attending physician, an advance practice registered nurse or a physician's assistant. My proxy caregivers will be taught by a licensed healthcare professional to do the health maintenance activities generally described below and more specifically listed on my written plan of care. Health maintenance activities are defined as those activities that have reasonably precise and unchanging directions, reasonably predictable outcomes and do not require complex observation skills or critical decisions. Health maintenance activities do not include things like administering medications by injection directly into the blood stream or taking care of a central intravenous line or a complex wound. I understand that:

1. using proxy caregivers may make it more affordable or convenient for me to receive health maintenance activities I need in the place I consider my home rather than in a more structured kind of healthcare facility, such as a nursing home, personal care home or hospital;
2. my proxy caregivers are not licensed healthcare professionals and have not had the same extensive training that licensed healthcare professionals receive;
3. there may be additional health risks in having unlicensed proxy caregivers do health maintenance activities for me since they may not recognize an important change in my medical condition that needs to be assessed or treated by a licensed healthcare professional;
4. I am consenting to my medical information being shared with my proxy caregivers to be trained to provide care to me;
5. the attending physician, an advance practice registered nurse or a physician's assistant whose orders or written plan of care allow health maintenance activities to be performed for me is not responsible for my proxy caregivers' negligent performance of those activities unless the proxy caregivers are employed by the physician, advance practice registered nurse or physician's assistant to perform the health maintenance activities for me;
6. it is my responsibility, or a person legally authorized to act on my behalf, to notify the licensed healthcare professional to arrange for any additional training and evaluation if the health maintenance activities listed on my written plan of care change;
7. my consent for proxy caregivers to perform health maintenance activities for me may be revoked at any time either orally or in writing by notifying the designated proxy caregiver or licensed healthcare professional involved with my care.

My Health Maintenance Activities:

I give my consent for my proxy caregivers to do the following health maintenance activities for me. These health maintenance activities may be further explained on my written plan of care.

My Proxy Caregivers:

I give my consent for the following proxy caregivers to do the health maintenance activities listed above for me.

Periodic Resident and Family satisfaction surveys will be conducted to assess satisfaction of the resident experience. At a minimum the following are areas that the residents and families can provide feedback upon: quality of care, food, activities, cleanliness of the community, and helpfulness of staff.

Periodic team member satisfaction surveys will be conducted to assess satisfaction of the employee experience. Employees can provide feedback on areas such as compensation, benefits, supervisor and work environment.

Feedback from both verbal and written surveys is client attorney privileged information but will be used for ongoing program improvement with staff. Inservices to staff will be done on behaviors needed to improve quality delivery of care to residents and family based on feedback and management input.

Comments, Grievances and Complaints

Those ages 17 may work if they have completed a vocational training program as nursing assistant through a Georgia High School.

At least one staff person who has completed the minimum training requirements outlined in Rule 111-8-63-.09 must be present in the community at all times any residents are present to provide necessary oversight and assistance to staff providing hands-on personal services who have not completed the

- The physical layout of the community should be considered to enable staff to provide services.
- Staff must be assigned duties consistent with their positions, training, and qualifications.

Staff will wear name badges, which are readily visible with abbreviations of professional credentials if any, to identify themselves to residents.

Staff Ratios

- Flexible care ratios will be utilized when there is one on one care by a sitter or outside provider, but minimum state ratios of 1:15 and 1:25 will always be in place.
- Staff, such as cooks and maintenance staff, whose duties do not include routine oversight or delivery of direct personal care are not counted in the ratio.
- Staff will generally be scheduled for 7.5 or 8 hour shifts. Shorter or longer shifts will be scheduled based on resident needs.
- A monthly staff schedule will be maintained on file at the community for at least one year.

When a resident requires assisted self-preservation, their needs will be considered in regard to the care plan and staffing adjusted with ranges to accommodate their health and safety. If there is need for a sitter for one-to-one care, that will be addressed with the family for the provision of such care. If the family, after reviewing the service plan recommendation, agrees to provide one-on-one care themselves, then the family will also agree that they will maintain the care by themselves, an approved sitter service and a backup to meet community requirements. If the family cannot provide one-on-one care with a sitter, the community will decide if it can meet the one-on-one requirement. If it is unable, a 30-day move-out notice will be given. If the community accepts the resident with one-on-one sitter care and the private sitter does not show up the community will make attempts with family and sitter to cover the one-on-one care but if not able they will provide one-on-one care for that shift. Families will be advised that they need to work with sitter services that can maintain coverage for call outs. If families repeatedly do not have back up coverage, a 30-day move-out notice will be given. There will be a care charge levied anytime one-on-one care is provided, and this will be disclosed up front in the admission agreement.
