SC Cooking Appliance Safety

Revised 05/01/2018 Reviewed 05/01/2018

Policy Purpose

Merrill Gardens recognizes that each resident has abilities and needs that are unique to them. Some resident apartments are equipped with residential kitchen appliances. To support resident independence and provide a safer environment, we evaluate the safety needs of our residents. Resident access to in-unit appliances will be at the discretion of the Community.

Guidelines

Evaluation

INITIAL EVALUATION

Each resident residing in an apartment with a stove or microwave oven is to have the Cooking Evaluation section of the Merrill Gardens Evaluation software completed upon move-in to evaluate their ability to operate cooking appliances safely. If the results on the Cooking Evaluation indicate the resident is not safe to cook unattended, the resident's stove and/or microwave oven need to be disabled or removed from the apartment. Any exception must be approved by the Regional Vice President of Operations.

The Service Plan should indicate when a stove or microwave oven has been disabled or removed.

RE-EVALUATION

When the resident has an apparent change in cognitive ability, the Cooking Evaluation should be repeated to determine whether the stove and/or microwave oven should be disabled or removed from the apartment.

The Cooking Evaluation does not need to be completed routinely for residents determined to be restricted from unsupervised cooking. Residents granted access to in-unit cooking appliances should be re-evaluated at least annually.

When in doubt, always err on the side of caution. If the resident's cognitive ability fluctuates, it is best to disable the cooking appliances.

Use of In-Unit Cooking Appliances by Residents

The community has a dining program where food is prepared by Dining Services team members in the commercial kitchen and residents make selections from a menu. Residents are encouraged to come to the dining room for meals. Tray service to resident apartments is also available on a temporary basis for residents who are ill.

- Residents may prepare their own food items in the in-unit kitchens. For example: some residents prefer to prepare breakfast in their apartment and take the rest of their meals in the common dining room.
- The Service Plan should indicate when a stove or microwave oven has been disabled or removed.
- Residents are to provide their own food items, kitchenware, dishes and utensils for in-unit food preparation.
- Housekeeping will check the in-unit kitchen area for improperly stored or expired food and dirty dishware during weekly routine apartment cleaning. Residents will be informed, and improperly stored or expired food items will be discarded. Dirty dishware will be cleaned.

If team members observe that a resident is not maintaining the in-unit kitchen, or there are appliance use or food safety concerns, the Community nurse will be notified to evaluate the situation. Resident access to in-unit appliances will be at the discretion of the Community.

SC In-Unit Laundry Safety

Revised 05/01/2018 Reviewed 05/01/2018

Policy Purpose

Merrill Gardens recognizes that each resident has abilities and needs that are unique to them. Some resident apartments are equipped with residential washers and dryers. The notable exceptions are the locked Garden House memory care unit apartments.

While Merrill Gardens provides resident laundry services in a Community run commercial laundry facility with proper storage and cleaning capacity for soiled linens available to all residents, the building will serve independent and lower acuity assisted living residents who may prefer to do laundry privately in their own apartment. The ability of our residents to have the option to do their own personal laundry in their apartments normalizes their routine and promotes privacy and dignity. Additionally, including a washer and dryer in the resident apartment unit helps create an environment that is as homelike as possible.

In order to support resident independence and promote a safer environment, we evaluate the safety needs of our residents.

Guidelines

Controls

Every laundry closet in individual resident units will be provided with lockable door hardware. Each resident will have cognitive screening completed at move-in, and at least annually and as required by regulation. The results of this screening will be used to determine whether the resident has the capacity to safely operate the laundry equipment in their apartment. If at any time, they are not deemed to be safe, access to laundry equipment and chemicals will be locked by team members to prevent use by the resident. Additionally, the unit entry doors to the assisted living apartments will be equipped with self-closers and electronic locks which will restrict access to laundry equipment and products by unauthorized individuals.

Access to Laundry Closet

Team members will have access to locked laundry closets in resident apartments. Team members may utilize the apartment laundry to launder the resident's personal clothing, towels and linens. The closet is to be locked when the team member is not loading or unloading the equipment, or otherwise accessing the closet for a task. Personal laundry chemicals are to be stored in the locked closet.

Persons authorized on the Service Plan to assist the resident with laundry may have a key to the laundry closet as long as they agree to keep the closet locked and chemicals stored as above.

Evaluation

INITIAL EVALUATION

Each resident residing in an apartment with a washer and dryer is to have a Mini Mental Status Exam (MMSE) completed upon move-in to evaluate their cognitive ability. If the results on the MMSE are below 24, the resident's laundry closet needs to be locked and the key retained by the Community. The Laundry Safety Evaluation is also to be completed at move-in for any resident moving into an apartment containing a washer and dryer.

The Service Plan should indicate when the resident is not to have unsupervised access to the laundry closet.

RE-EVALUATION

The MMSE cognitive screen should be completed at least annually. When the resident has an apparent decline in cognitive ability, the Laundry Safety evaluation should be repeated to determine whether access to the laundry closet should be restricted.

The Laundry Safety Evaluation does not need to be completed routinely for residents determined to be restricted from unsupervised access to the laundry closet. Residents granted access to the laundry closet (either supervised or unsupervised) should be re-evaluated at least annually.

SC Quality Improvement Program

Revised 06/14/2018 Reviewed 06/14/2018

Policy Purpose

Pursuant to R 1801, Merrill Gardens has planned, established and implemented a written quality improvement program.
